Hon. MacKenzie King Speaks To Crowds At Fair

It is not often that the Town of Wainwright has had the opportunity of hearing an ex-premier of the Dominion who is at the same time the leader of one of the major parties. It is therefore not surprising that a very large crowd assembled to hear Mr. MacKenzie King when he spoke at the fair grounds last Wednesday.

Mr. King was greeted at the railway station by Hon. Charles Stewart and Mr. W. R. Howson, leader of the Liberal party in the province and a group of representative members of the party from Edmonton, Vermilion, Provost, Edgerton, Chauvin, Irma and other points. He proceeded immediately to the fair grounds and delivered an address to a large and attentive audience. His reception left no ground for doubt that the people of this district are giving serious consideration to political problems and are ready to listen to a message from one who has a message to deliver whether or not they agree with his point of view.

Mr. King criticized briefly the record of the Conservative party since they assumed office, stressing the fact that at the last election extravagant promises were made by the present Premier which have not been realized.

A major portion of his address was devoted to the C.C.F. The speaker claimed that many of the planks in their platform were very similar to those for which Liberals have always stood but he condemned that part of their program which would take away from the individual the right to carry on his business as he might see fit, subject to such Governmental regulation as might protect the rights of others. He made the statement that in order to allow the State to acquire the holdings of individuals either one or two courses must be pursued. Either the State should buy out the farmer, merchant or other business man, or private owners should be compelled to hand over their property by armed force. If the first course were adopted the speaker asked where the money should come from. The State had no means of raising revenues except by taxation. It was suggested that the Country should print sufficient money for this purpose, but the experience of other countries who have tried wild inflation of currency went to show that this would be a ruinous alternative especially for the individual. Mr. King paid tribute to the sincerity of the men behind the C.C.F. movement but warned his hearers against being led by mistaken leaders, however well-intentioned.

The question of repeal of Section 98 of the Criminal Code was brought up by a member of the audience and this gave Mr. King an opportunity of pointing out that not only was the

Hon. MacKenzie King

Liberal party in the house in favor of the repeal but on two occasions had brought in and passed bills in the House of Commons with this end in view, only to have the bills thrown out by the Senate in which there was a non-Liberal majority.

The meeting at the Fair Grounds was presided over by Mayor Forster, and on the platform were Hon. Chas. Stewart, Mr. W. R. Howson and others. After the address a complimentary banquet was tendered to Mr. King in the Wainwright Hotel, presided over by Mr. R. M. Lee, Pres-

Wainwright Wins First Money At Ball Tournament

With five teams entered from Irma, Hughenden, Ribstone, Vermilion and Wainwright, visitors to the local Fair on Wednesday, August 9th, were well entertained by some exciting games of baseball during the day.

In the first game in the morning Wainwright was drawn against Irma. This was one of the best games of the day as it turned out to be a real pitcher's duel. Wainwright opened up the scoring in the first inning by bringing in four runs, while Irma retaliated with one run. The scoreboard remained the same until the fifth inning when Wainwright got another run. Irma managed to bring in two more runs in the sixth and to add one more in the seventh, but just could not put over the tying run and Wainwright were declared winners, by a score of 5 to 4.

The first afternoon game was between Hughenden and Vermilion, with Hughenden winning by a score of 9 to 4. Hughenden took the lead in the 2nd innings by scoring 1 run and added four more in the fourth. Vermilion scored one in the 5th, two in the sixth and one in the seventh, but Hughenden retaliated by scoring two runs in each of the sixth and seventh innings.

The third game between Hughenden and Ribstone developed into a slugfest, both teams hitting freely and often. The game started quietly enough with the batters being retired one, two, three in the first two innings. In the last half of the third innings things began to happen. The Ribstone heavy hitters found the pitching just to their liking and soon the bases were loaded with four runs on the score sheet. At this stage a new pitcher was sent in by Hughenden but still the runs kept crossing the plate. Finally when the score read seven to nothing a third pitcher was sent in to stem the flood, and Ribstone was retired without any further scoring.

In the fourth Hughenden started to show their side of the board. Every man on the team started to hit, which combined with errors and loose fielding on the part of Ribstone, soon wiped out the substantial lead which Ribstone had secured. Finally a relief pitcher was sent in but before the smoke of battle cleared away eleven runners had safely crossed home plate.

Ribstone came with two more runs in the last half of the fourth, two in the fifth and three in the sixth to take the lead at fourteen to twelve. Hughenden scoring one in the 5th inning. In the seventh Hughenden started to hit again and drove in three runs which proved to be sufficient. The final score being fifteen to fourteen in favor of Hughenden.

The three games were umpired by J. G. Clark, who kept the games moving rapidly at all times.

The final game between Wainwright and Hughenden was witnessed by a large enthusiastic crowd and was sufficiently thrilling from start to finish to keep the fans in a constant uproar. Both teams played snappy ball, with just enough runs to keep the crowd on edge all through, with Wainwright having a slight advantage. Hughenden opened up with one run in the first inning but Wainwright took the lead in the same inning by scoring twice. In the last half of the third the big guns of the Wainwright team found things to their liking and let out savagely, scoring four runs to take a substantial lead. The next two innings developed into a pitcher's duel, the batters being retired in quick order, and then in the sixth Hughenden started a rally but could only score one run, as Harry Murray, who pitched a wonderful game, struck out the next two batters. Although it was getting fairly late eight innings were

Alberta Grain Do Well At Regina

At the World's Grain Exhibition at Regina, Alberta carried off four of the eleven chief awards, its main victory being won by Prinsland Wilford, Staveland, Alberta, whose prize-winning Reward wheat sample in the hard red spring wheat class earned him the title of wheat king. His victory brought him $2,000 in cash.

Two for Treble Herman Treble, Wembley grower, earned two of the other Alberta honors, and Fred Paschtag, Goodfere, took the $2,000 prize money in the leading oats class, white medium, or late, for his first. Treble earned $1,500 by winning the special class for hard red spring wheat and $1,200 for first in the yellow oats, medium or late.

British Columbia took three of the chief awards. The coast province broke into prairie wheat growing victories through A. J. Fisher, Armstrong, taking the white winter wheat class and the $2,000 prize money. First prize of $1,500 in the leading barley class, six-rowed by Matlock Brothers of Rayleigh, B.C. and the blue ribbon for rye was carried off by Mr. S. Middleton, Vernon, B.C.

Montana took two of the remaining four coveted honors, while Australia and Manitoba took one each. Montana's victories, earning in each case $2,000 for the winner, were scored by Thomas E. Smith of Corvallis, in the hard red winter wheat class, and C. Edson Smith, another Corvallis resident, for winning the soft red winter wheat honors.

Axel Bergkvist, Sanford, carried Manitoba into the honors list by winning first in the durum wheat class and the $1,500 prize.

First place in white spring wheat, with $2,000 prize money, went to John W. Eade, Richardsburg, N.S.W., Australia.

Alberta carried off three firsts in the grasses; Ontario took two and Prince Edward Island and Manitoba one each. British Columbia took all three awards in the field roots.

Robert Cochrane, Grande Prairie, won the Timothy honors; Edward Harrop, Hualien, Alberta, finished first in the brome class, and the School of Agriculture at Oids, Alberta, took top place in the class for agropyron species, western rye, wheat grass, etc.

HAPPY VACATIONISTS

Master William Herridge, son of Hon. W. D. Herridge, Canadian Minister to Washington and Mrs. Herridge, and nephew of Canada's Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, is seen here with his mother, both of them apparently enjoying themselves at Canada's great Maritime playground, the Katy's Cove beach of the Algonquin Hotel St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, New Brunswick, where they are spending their vacation. Major Herridge joined them for a while.

Near Drowning At Vermilion Recently

Scout resourcefulness and training again resulted in the saving of a life at the Vermilion river on Monday afternoon when Geoff Brimacombe pulled nine-year-old George ("Buster") Knoll from the bottom of the river and together with Scouts Jimmy Rogan, Leon Gould, Elmer Eadie and Jack Knoll, applied artificial respiration which restored the little boy's breathing and circulation.

A number of boys were swimming in a deep hole in the river below the east end of town. The river is particularly deep at the spot, with a muddy, uneven bottom. Three steps from the bank precipitates you into 5 to 6 feet of water. At the time of the accident all the boys, about 12 in number, had left the river and were either drinking or sunning themselves on the bank. The view of the river is partly obscured by high bank and a fringe of willows. Suddenly George Boyer thought he saw, through an opening in the willows, a hand disappear beneath the water. He gave the alarm and a quick check-up revealed little Buster Knoll, son of Dr. J. J. Knoll, to be missing. George Boyer and Jim Knoll immediately raced up the hill to notify the parents of Buster's disappearance, some of the boys called and searched the surrounding bushes, while Geoff Brimacombe, 17 years, Ross Meeks, 14, and Jimmy Rogan, 14, began diving into and probing the river where the hand was seen to disappear. Geoff, in water over his depth and about 20 feet from shore, felt the submerged boy with his foot and at once dove for him. So long was he under in attempting to raise the weight of the unconscious lad that spectators began to fear for him also. However he came to the surface with the inert boy under his arm, practically exhausted after his heroic effort. Seeing his plight, three of the other boys went to his aid and young Knoll was relayed from Geoff to Ross Meek to Jim Rogan to Ronald Sherback to the safety of the shore.

The boy's rescue was still unfinished and true to their Scout training and showing "marvelous teamwork and knowledge of just what should be done, the Scouts under the direction of Geoff, began rendering first aid to what was to all intents a drowned boy; Brimacombe began artificial respiration movements, Rogan attended to the boy's mouth and tongue, Leon Gould and Jack Knoll massaged the cold, purple, discolored limbs, while Elmer Eadie kindled a fire. Five minutes' feverish work brought signs of returning life to

The 1933 Wainwright Fair was declared by all to be a decided success. The exhibits in all classes were above average in quality, although many sections were very lightly filled. Perfect weather prevailed giving the Particulars of the winners of the different exhibits will be given as soon as the copy is given us.

Mayor Forster opened the fair Tuesday morning and while the attendance was light at the beginning, the crowds gathered rapidly and those in charge of the gate declared it a splendid success financially.

The crowds were augmented Wednesday afternoon due to the visit of Hon. MacKenzie King, whose speech is given elsewhere in the paper. Next week we hope to give you complete details.

ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS.

A report of the U. F. A. convention held at Wainwright last week states that Premier Brownlee and J. R. Love, M. L. A., for Wainwright, who were speakers, "merely mentioned" the Wainwright highway and that funds and gravel to finish it were not available. But they forgot to mention the hundreds of miles being gravelled and graded in other parts of the province at this very time. Where did the government get the funds for this? Some of it comes from the pockets of the ratepayers of Wainwright and Sedgewick constituencies.

We might "merely mention" that there are plenty of gravel beds and loose rock beds between Viking and Wainwright that could be utilized for graveling this part of the highway. As for funds, the government raised the ante on the gasoline tax one cent per gallon this year, making a tax of six cents per gallon. Part of this might be used to finish this highway, at least gravel from Holden to Viking this year.

The premier also stated that only two new taxes had been added by the Brownlee government. But he forgot to mention the innumerable fees that had been doubled, yes, trebled in many cases. The report goes on to say that everybody was satisfied with the speakers' explanations. Yes, it looks like the Wainwright and Sedgewick constituencies have to be satisfied with a lot of talk—while the rest of the province gets some action.

Canadian Press Declines Payment For Daily News Broadcasts

TORONTO, Canada.—Approved by its recent annual meeting in Quebec, The Canadian Press has agreed to furnish news bulletins to the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission, The service commenced on July 17. In a statement issued by J. F. R. Lively, General Manager of The Canadian Press, the following information about the service was given.

"It is an interesting experiment. We decided we would take no payment from the Commission, because in the public interest we are as anxious as the Commission itself to co-operate in the supply of reliable news broadcasts for the people of Canada, particularly those in the northern areas out of reach of newspapers. We also want to keep our hands free as to the scope and character of the service. In this, particularly in the elimination of the objectionable noon broadcast, we have had the cordial support of Hector Charlesworth, chairman of the Commission, himself a distinguished Canadian newspaper man."

"There will be two news bulletins of five minutes each, that is to say of 300 or 400 words apiece, prepared by the Canadian Press and made available to the Commission at our wire points across the continent for broadcasting at 6:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. local standard time. The bulletins will be sponsored by the Commission as being by courtesy of The Canadian Press."

"It is gratifying that this arrangement, which is to run experimentally for two years, appears to have the unanimous approval of our membership. To one who has listened in at our meetings for the past two or three years to the hurly burly of argument as between members who broadcast and the much larger number who don't, this is not only gratifying but almost a miracle. No one knows where radio is going in the next few years, and taking the long view, it is no doubt wise that The Canadian Press should establish its news service in the air as it has over the land."

"We are very much obliged to Mr. Charlesworth and his colleagues for agreeing to discard the proposed noon broadcast, because our experience in our members are reluctant to carry out their obligation to produce promptly in the forenoon for The Canadian Press their local and regional news. If it is to be broadcast back into their territory hours before their newspapers are on the street. As from July 17, save for these two specified broadcasts, no member of The Canadian Press will be permitted to broadcast our news."

Canadian Business Shows Distinct Signs Of Recovery

MONTREAL, Canada.—Canada's optimism, her confidence in the future which never faltered even during the lowest depths of the depression, is being justified by events. A sustained improvement in business conditions during the past three or four months now is admitted by experts as something more than a passing flurry, and while caution still is urged, speculation advised against, the public are convinced that the road to normal conditions now lies straight ahead.

The great improvement in wheat prices has had a tremendous effect upon, not only the pockets, but the morale of the Western provinces, and also has saved the Dominion Government perhaps $25,000,000 in its venture in wheat stabilization. In six months fifty representative Canadian stocks increased in quoted market values by some $1,250,000,000.

Basic commodity prices are moving slowly upwards. Car loadings are higher, and railway earnings increased. Production of automobiles and newsprint are coming back, and more motor cars were built in May than in any one month for two years. Agricultural implement plants have increased operations. The textile industry is working at nearly 90 per cent of capacity and is on a better basis than for many months. There has been a steady improvement in the lumber industry, and the immediate outlook is considered more favorable than for some years. The construction industry still is lagging, and iron and steel is slow to feel the effects of the new trend.

The number of unemployed has seen a substantial decrease, and the usual midsummer recession in activities has been less marked than ordinarily. Retail trade is picking up, and as most merchants have carried a small stock of goods in recent months, an improved public demand has had an immediate beneficial effect all along the line to the factory.

Ants In Houses

Ants are reported from many districts in the Dominion to be particularly abundant in dwelling houses this season. Although the majority of the Canadian species of ants live in colonies or nests out-doors they frequently cause annoyance by invading kitchens and pantries in search of food. One of the most common and troublesome species, known as the red, or Pharaoh's ant, says the Dominion Entomologist, confines itself entirely to heated buildings, such as bakeries, restaurants, houses, etc. This tiny, reddish-yellow ant had its origin in the tropics. Another species, the common large black carpenter ant, although normally an outdoor species, nesting principally in decaying wood, frequently occurs in dwellings, particularly frame houses and summer cottages, and may cause injury to woodwork as well as annoyance by its presence. A third common species is the small yellowish-brown lawn ant, which nests in lawns and gardens, often entering houses in search of food.

Ants are social in their habits and live together in colonies. The majority of the ants in a colony, and the ones most commonly seen are wingless undeveloped female workers which are incapable of reproducing their kind. Each colony also possesses one or more true females or "queens" which are responsible for the generation of new individuals. The white helpless larvae and pupae which develop from eggs laid by the "queen" are cared for by the workers, which may be seen transporting them to a place of safety when the nest is threatened with danger. Ants which enter dwellings will feed on many kinds of foodstuffs, but are particularly fond of sweet and fatty substances.

The most satisfactory material for destroying ants is sodium fluoride, sold by druggists in the form of fine white powder. This powder should be scattered lightly in places frequented by ants and left undisturbed until the insects have disappeared. As sodium fluoride is somewhat poisonous, care should be taken to prevent children or pets from gaining access to it. Ants may be discouraged from entering houses by keeping shelves, tables and floors in pantries as free as possible from crumbs and other food fragments, and by storing foodstuffs and walls through which ants may gain entrance should be carefully plugged. When it is possible to find the ants' nest in the ground outside, the whole ant colony may be destroyed by puncturing the surface with holes and pouring in several tablespoonfuls of carbon bisulphide. Heavy gas is given off by this liquid, and its effect may be strengthened by covering the nest with an old coat or sack. However, great care should be taken not to expose carbon bisulphide near fire or flame because it is very inflammable.

CANADIAN NATIONAL

Soap Suds

"I suppose," thought Travers, "they are not at home, but having come all this way I may as well make sure."

He had promised old Bill to look up the latter's people on his return to England, and his thoughts of his pal in the wilds of Africa had made him faithful to a promise. But he had pulled an antiquated bell in vain—knocked, hammered, in vain. The old house with its quaint past-century appearance remained silent, unresponsive, so that Travers would have gone away had he not heard from mysterious back regions the sound of a gay laugh.

That laugh matched the spring sunshine, and Jack Travers obeyed an impulse. He walked boldly round to the back premises and stood delighted at an unexpected sight.

A red brick yard, partly covered in a tangle of old-world garden with massed primroses for borders in the background, and before him a girl standing with tucked skirts before a mighty tub brimming with soap suds. Travers noted the daintiness of small feet and ankles, the whiteness of bare arms and the vivid blue of the cotton dress before his gaze became rivetted on the yet more vivid little face above the billowing suds.

She wore a quaint Dutch cap from under which bronze curls peeped daintily; her cheeks were flushed and dimpled, lips, eyes, her whole face laughed in gayest and most sparkling mirth, as from time to time she tossed soap suds in the direction of a most aggrieved Aberdeen terrier.

It was a picture to remain in one's memory and Travers was a man of impulse. Never again would Fate give him such a chance, since, alas! he had no opportunity for an excuse to visit a laundrymaid, so he stole round by a red brick wall and settled Jack's grievance for him by revenge on his tormentor.

But he had no time to bestow a second kiss on those fragrant, laughing lips, since the girl, in a whirl of mock indignation, had plunged snowy arms into her tub and smothered him with soap suds.

Was there ever so ignominious a rout—such cruel retaliation. Yet the avenger only stood laughing till tears hung on black lashes as she watched a tall hero standing there in the sunshine, shaking himself free of suds, which went scudding away on a frolicsome breeze like spume dived by a wave.

I won't be answerable for Jack's language, since the suit was new and soap suds greasy; also he had taken an involuntary mouthful of the same. Little Dutch-cap stood with one arm on her tub, still laughing. She knew who had the best of the bargain and Scotch Jack barked in joyous chorus.

Jack Travers did not laugh, though too late he regretted not having done so. But we all know when too late, what would have been the best thing to do and say. So instead of trying to take another kiss on the principle of a penny's worth being no worse than a pound, Travers retreated, leaving all the honors of war to the damsel of the soap suds.

Of course, it was impossible now to call on the Hilders, even if they were at home. Wet and disheveled, the young man went his way, and Dutch-cap after surreptitiously following to see him well off the premises, returned to her suds, her song and Scotch Jack.

Travers wrote to Mrs. Hilders regretting that he had missed them, and Mrs. Hilders wrote back to say that she and her daughter were coming to Hertford next week, which would be quite near Mr. Travers home, and she hoped they would meet.

Travers was not sure that he echoed the wish since—er—the laundrymaid would not be visiting Hertford.

And then—it was the whilly unexpected that happened, and Travers felt a first that he must have made a mistake, he was seeing double—or—there was a double somewhere about! He was standing near the doorway of Mrs. Sarberry-Cox's ballroom, and a girl who had been talking to a partner near suddenly turned and looked at him.

It was the damsel of the soap suds!

There are some faces which we cannot mistake however different the setting in which we see them. In place of a Dutch cap the strawlike laundry dress wore a Juliet cap with tiny pearl beads which contrasted with a mass of bronze curls, whilst white satin and corals took the place of the blue frock; but the eyes were the same, the dimples the same, the lips the same. And to clinch the whole argument concerning doubles, the damsel in question held out her hand.

Mr. Travers, she said, with astounding bravado, "I think we have met before. May I introduce my cousin and fiancé, Captain Jilson."

Travers shook hands and bowed like a man stunned by shock. Of course, he realized that this must be Bill's sister—Kitty Hilders. And he had mistaken her for a kitchen lass. Yes, paramount over his shame was the added disgust that that lank fellow with red hair and freckles should be the fiancé of such perfection.

"Last time I met Mr. Travers Charlie," went on the audacious Miss Hilders, "I was washing. You know I did all the work whilst we were at the Grange excepting for Sally's help, and Mr. Travers called when I was re-dub deep in soap suds. Do you remember those soap suds, Mr. Travers?"

"Of course I do—a pleasant memory. Will you give me the next dance I want to hear about—your Aberdeen terrier."

Captain Jilson trotted off in search of another partner and Jack Travers was given his dance.

"I want to hear about Bill," explained Kitty, gaily. "And Scotch Jack sends his respects and agrees with you about the soap suds."

She had no shame at all. Jack Travers moralized on his way home over the audacity of girls, but he called next day at the Hilders and Kitty asked him if he would teach her to fish.

"Bill has told us all about your love of sport," she said, "and I want to learn how to throw a fy."

Travers nearly suggested that Charlie Jilson would make a better teacher but refrained because he realized he should rather like the job himself. Bill had been so keen that he should see a good deal of his people.

Kitty Hilders, in blue golf coat and cap, looked adorable. At least, had she not been engaged to another fellow, Jack Travers would have thought she looked adorable. As it was, he wondered only what she could see in that lanky, freckled chap who looked like an overgrown schoolboy.

He wondered the more and more whilst he perfected Miss Dutch-cap in the gentle art of angling, being too fond of talking—she wanted to hear all about Bill, tobacco growing, and many things that did not interest Jack in the least. But he rather enjoyed the picnic-teas they indulged in on the river bank. Kitty was a baby over cake, and adored chocolates. A first Travers had wondered whether Sandy-head (as he called the unfortunate Jilson) would object to another fellow offering chocolates to his girl, but a first gift proved so great a success that he had tried others.

Only it annoyed him ridiculously when he saw Sandy-head devouring those peppermint creams.

It was not till within a week of his return to Africa that Travers made a hideous discovery. He had fallen in love with Dutch-cap. Curious how he still called her that, still more—or less curious that his thoughts dwell long and tenderly on that occasion of a first meeting. He could have endured a dozen tubs full of soap suds now for sake of—sake of—

"It's no use," groaned Jack. "I've been a fool and a cad. I must clear."

With the brusqueness of a man announcing what he feels only concerns himself, he told Dutch-cap that he was going to sail next day, and feared he should not see her again.

Kitty, nearly dropped her fishing rod, but all she said was, "Oh! really!"

It was not a successful day's sport and Travers had to go home early. They said good-bye on the river bank and Travers felt as if he were going to face miseries little short of hanging.

It was "Fare thee well, and if forever, then fare thee well." And when they met again, his exquisite little lady of the soap suds would be dull Mrs. Jilson—wife to a freckled sandy-head.

Travers felt awful, so awful that he never asked himself what Dutch-cap felt—he couldn't have supposed she felt anything since she actually loved that—er—cad.

Travers strode up the river bank in the proverbial despair of a man who has to give up what never belonged to him. But as he went, Fate placed in his way that same Scotch Jack who did not like soap suds. Scotch Jack had hurt his paw, and looked to Travers for sympathy, so picking up the jumping animal, he carried him back to where, no doubt, Kitty would be eating her tea in seclusion.

Ontario Bans The Sale of Securities

TORONTO, Canada.—Important new regulations now are effective in the province of Ontario for protecting the purchase of securities, and they have been endorsed by the Investment Bankers' Association of Canada. The good legislation which will go a long way towards saving the people from loss.

Perhaps the most important clause is one which restricts house-to-house canvassing by security salesmen, and which reads as follows:

"No person shall call at any house for the purpose of trading in any security with the public or any member of the public, and any violation of this regulation shall constitute an offence."

"In this regulation the expression 'house' shall not include an office used for business purposes, and the expression 'public' shall not include close personal friends, business associates or customers with whom the person making the offer has been in the habit of doing regular business in the purchase or sale of shares."

"This regulation shall not apply to the sale of the bonds of any Government in Canada or Great Britain, or of any municipality or other incorporated body in the Dominion of Canada which is empowered by statute to obtain the money necessary for the payment of interest and redemption of the bonds by public taxation."

It is provided also that no broker or salesman "shall complete a trade with any customer until a copy of the latest prospectus of the security issuer filed under the provisions of the Companies Act, 1928, has been delivered to the person to whom the offer is made."

Another clause sets it out that before a deal for securities is completed the salesman shall deliver to the customer a statement, "which clearly discloses the nature of the transaction"; whether the salesman is acting as principal or agent, and if the latter, the commission he is receiving.

Pig Feeding Methods

Although there are several methods of preparing meal mixtures for feeding pigs, the following rules are recommended by the Swine Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture as safe practices in producing hogs of the desired type. (1) Grind all grain. Fine grinding is recommended especially for young pigs. (2) Soak meal mixture between feeds do not use too much water but feed as a fairly thick slop. (3) Hand feeding is the best method for securing hogs of a desirable type. (4) If necessary, a self-feeder may be used after pigs have reached the growing stage of development. (5) Keep pails, troughs and other feeding equipment clean. Moldy or decaying matter will cause feeding troubles, and (6) Supply clean drinking water.

But she was doing nothing of the kind. She lay on the grass, face downwards, and she was crying.

Travers put Scotch Jack down so hastily that the dignified quadruped forgot to howl, then he went round to Kitty's side. His first idea was that she had hurt herself, but his second—"Oh, Jack," sobbed Dutch-cap, quite unaware who knelt beside her, "W-what a brute I was—and—oh—Jack, you must come back, because—I—I want you so."

The shade of Sandy-head faded amongst the trees. Travers utterly ignored the fact that it had ever been there. He had a clear vision of a small face now, of quivering lips, of drenched blue eyes and tangled curls, so—so—

There was not even the shadow of a dimple's invitation, but he kissed her. Yes, and kissed her again, though it was a mean advantage since she had no tub of soap suds handy. But I don't believe she would have used them in any case.

Scotch Jack, unsympathized with over his injured paw, ate up the cakes in revenge, but the incident passed unnoticed. Cakes no more concerned those two near by than they had King Alfred.

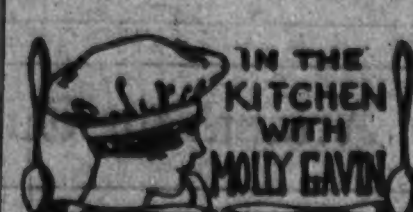

"But," hinted Dutch-cap, after she was well convinced that her companion could not turn himself away, "you forgot—Charlie."

"Not a bit of it," he retorted, "I remember him perfectly, also I remember it was you I wanted. So—"

"After all," sighed Dutch-cap, demurely, "he never was my fiancé. I only told you that to pay out for—"

His indignation was only mock, though his triumph was complete. "As if the soap suds were not enough," he yowed, "you heartless wench!"

She didn't mind in the least what he called her, for she had known from the very first moment they met that one day he would call her "darling." She had been perfectly correct in her surmise.

IN THE KITCHEN WITH MOLLY GAWN

When making baking powder biscuits add a teaspoon of sugar and the baking powder will not taste. Butter-milk is always a successful substitute for fresh milk when making biscuits.

After using the meat chopper run a slice of bread through it to clean it out. It will be much easier to wash and none of the ground food will be wasted.

If the breakfast room is not so bright and sunny as we would have it, gaily-colored cretonnes at the windows will help a great deal towards that cheeriness.

Cut sirloin or round steak that has been pounded, in strips an inch wide. Roll, surround with bacon strips, fastened with a toothpick. Spread prepared mustard across top and bottom of roll and broil to desired rareness.

As soon as you arrive in the kitchen to prepare breakfast, turn on the water faucets for a few minutes. Then when you are ready to make the coffee or tea, the water that has laid in the pipes all night has been run off and you will get a fresh supply.

The water from the pipes is unhealthful. If the curtains are worn and you are afraid they will not stand laundering, try putting them in a pillowcase and then soaking in a tub of soapy water and kerosene. Remove the bag when the water is dirty and repeat the process until the curtains are clean. In this way there will be no strain on the curtains and you may get another year's wear out of them.

Peach Delights

1 quart flour
2 tps. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1 egg
3 tps. baking powder
1/2 cup butter
Milk

1 tsp. lemon extract
Whipped cream
Sift the flour, salt, sugar and baking powder together. Then rub in the butter. Add the extract and enough milk to make a soft dough.

Drop the mixture into buttered or greased muffin pans, place 1/2 peach on each, fill the cavities with sugar. Bake in a hot oven 25 minutes. Serve with whipped cream. This amount will serve 20 persons but half of the recipe may be used if desired.

Baked Peaches

Peel, cut in halves and remove the stones from six peaches. Place in a shallow granite pan. Fill each cavity with one teaspoon of sugar, 1/2 teaspoon of butter and a few drops of lemon juice. A little nutmeg may be added if desired. Cook 20 minutes and serve on circular pieces of buttered dry toast.

Peach Pie

Line a pie pan with a rich crust. Slice peaches onto this until the bottom is fully covered. Sprinkle sugar over the peaches to make them sweet enough and dust with a handful of flour. Pour sweet cream in each crevice until the cream is level with the peaches. Bake until brown. This is delicious when allowed to set for two or three hours before using.

Ripe Cucumber Pickle

Cut cucumbers in halves lengthwise. Cover with alum water, allowing two teaspoons powdered alum to each quart of water. Heat gradually to the boiling point, then let stand on back of range two hours. Remove from alum water and chill in ice water. Make a syrup of boiling five minutes two pounds sugar, one pint vinegar, with two tablespoons each of whole cloves and stick cinnamon tied in a piece of muslin. Add cucumbers and cook ten minutes. Remove cucumbers to a stone jar and pour over the syrup. Soak syrup three successive mornings and return to cucumbers.

Apple Meringue

8 apples
3 egg yolks
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
2 cups milk
1 tsp. vanilla

Core apples and bake until tender. Make a custard of the remaining ingredients; pour over baked apples. Cover with meringue made of the whites of the eggs and three tablespoons powdered sugar.

Tomato and Nut Salad

Remove the skin from eight tomatoes; scoop out the inside. Mix the drained pulp with equal amount of chopped walnuts and one-fourth cup chopped green peppers. Add Mayonnaise dressing. Refill tomato shells. Serve in lettuce nests, and garnish with Mayonnaise dressing.

Summer Squash

Wash and cut in quarters. Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain in cheese cloth. Add butter, salt and pepper. Reheat and serve.

Greens

Beet tops, spinach, dandelions, Swiss chard, young cabbage sprouts, cowslips may be prepared in the same way. Wash in many waters until all grit and sand are removed.

Preventing Pig Losses

One of the common causes of death among suckling pigs is nutritional anemia. The critical period is between two and four weeks of age. During this period and until weaning the suckling pig must have access to some source of iron in addition to the mother's milk. Professor Knox, O.A.C., says the Swiss Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, states that one of the simplest means of prevention of loss is to place

26 Canadian Regiments Receive Battle Honors

OTTAWA, Canada. — Thirty-two years after the peace which brought the Boer War to an end twenty-six units of the Canadian Militia have been awarded the battle honour, "South Africa" to be embroidered on their regimental colors. Approval on these honours has been granted by the King, under the same conditions as governed similar honours to the yeomanry and volunteer regiments of the British army.

The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were not in existence at the time of the South African campaign, but all the other seven are represented in the new honours. One regiment—the Saint John Fusiliers—receives double honours—South Africa 1899-1900, and 1902. Sixteen others may put in their colours "South Africa 1899-1900, and nine regiments are entitled to "South Africa 1900."

BARNYARD JINKS

Moncton, N. B., July 25—There have been high jinks down on a farm around Caledonia Mills, in Nova Scotia. The domestic relationships of the barnyard have been rudely upset but everything now seems to be in harmony, notwithstanding the topsyturvy "status-quo," states the Agriculture Department of the Canadian National Railway. It seems they got mixed from the start. The turkey sat on the hen's eggs and another consisting of turkey and hen eggs. The turkey sat on the hen's eggs and the hen on the turkey's eggs. Everything went along nicely and everybody was satisfied until the eggs hatched. The turkey looked over her brood of eighteen chicks and said "My goodness, do my eyes deceive me?" She evidently considered there were four too many for she promptly killed off that number and resignedly took on the job of caring for the remaining fourteen as becomes a turkey mother. The hen found three young turkeys along with nine chicks and sat in on the "top-sid" family as best she could. The hen has a reputation as a mother last year she hatched out 30 chickens

Protein For Pigs

Grain Alone Not Enough to Make Good Hogs

If the farmers of Canada are to supply the market with high grade bacon hogs, the use of protein supplement is a first essential along with grain feeds when skim-milk or buttermilk are not available. Tankage and fish-meal are high quality protein supplements, the one a by-product of the packing industry and the other a by-product of the fishing industry. Protein supplements of vegetable origin, when the price permits, may be used to replace some of the tankage or fish-meal but their use alone has not proven as satisfactory as tankage or fishmeal or quantities of both.

The feeding of tankage or fish-meal, in proper proportions makes it possible to increase the rate of gain in spring pigs by 25 per cent and up to 50 per cent in the case of fall pigs. Their use may also reduce the cost of production 10 per cent.

The various packers throughout Canada realizing the importance of tankage as a hog feed have agreed to make it available at the approximate cost of production. Fish-meal can also be made available for hog feeding through Farmers' Clubs or other local organizations.

Where farmers are in a position to obtain a mixed protein supplement or the ingredients for such, experiments indicate that the use of such a mixture in preference to single protein feeds is advantageous. The following mixture has been used successfully at Macdonald College since 1928 as a complete replacement of milk or other protein feed in the rations of swine:—Tankage 400 lbs., fish meal 200 lbs., linseed meal 200 lbs., feeding house meal 100 lbs., ground lime stone 75 lbs., fine salt 25 lbs., and Ferric Oxide 4 lbs.

The above mixture may be used satisfactorily with any of the numerous rations enumerated in Pamphlet 135, "Rations for Economical Pork Production" issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

hogs, one foot square in size, which have been treated with a solution of ferric sulphate, in a small pen, one rod for each pig each week. This sulphate can be sprinkled on the sod with an ordinary watering can, and the strength of the solution should be one teaspoonful of ferric sulphate to one quart of water per rod. It is wise to secure sows from areas where pigs have not frequented for at least one year, in order to prevent possible parasitic infection.
